learn to die

words by c. csillag, music by the jimibeat lifelong dreams changed into a big pay check my days are filled, feel like a nervous wreck can it be true, that our culture is inappropriate for us, to feel at ease?

theres big confusion about the things we crave compared to our substantial needs so when this culture doesn't work, there's just one thing to do go your own way, make it with heart and soul learn to die, and start living now, it's never too late when you realize you'll die, you gonna see the world in a different way shrouded by a veil of greed, searching for the obscured important things so learn to die, and start living now, it's never too late anybody knows, we'll die one day but there's no belief in, seems so far away this certain fact, such an emotional theme so natural, a taboo most extreme turning away, a fake search for more materialism seems to be the answer for bring that to mind, don't hurry, stay find outright satisfaction in an ordinary day learn to die, and start living now ... don't hold on to anything, when aging the evanescence brings vital experience, distance youreself, get rid of those useless things lifelong dreams instead a big pay check i gonna try so hard, to hold on to that fame and fortune the biggest lie 'cause authenticity you cannot buy i know love's the reason, the purpose in life i find it when i look into my daughters eyes and as i said, don't hurry, stay

find outright satisfaction in an ordinary day

learn to die, and start living now ...
